Boston fans who wish to be “in the know” about Boston’s professional sport teams will soon be able to access a new blog site by sport aficionado James Haidak. The microsite is slated to be released on April 27, 2021.

Haidak said he decided to create the site because he has long been a fan of Boston sports and wants to share his passion for the city’s iconic sport culture with the masses. On the website, readers can expect to find the latest information on the city’s professional baseball team, basketball team, and football team.

According to Haidak, the site will offer up-to-date accounts on recent games, game highlights, and recaps. In addition, readers will be able to access insightful information about Boston’s best players, as well as the histories of the city’s teams and games.

For instance, through the site, readers can gain Haidak’s insights regarding how the current basketball team is performing in today’s basketball landscape and how the team’s celebrated players are expected to fare in the seasons ahead.

The site also offers a comprehensive look at the fascinating career of Boston’s baseball team, including its humble beginnings as well as its most recent accomplishments. For instance, Haidak takes readers on a journey through the team’s earliest victories in the early 1900s, as well as the 80-year-plus period during which the team did not win any championship games. The team finally regained its footing in the 2000s, when it won several championship titles once again.
