Using Breathable, High Air Permeability Face Mask Coverings to Help Stop the Spread of Covid-19 and easy to sport outdoor and workout in public places.

HO CHI MINH, VIETNAM, April 17, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Covid-19 virus has been the biggest story worldwide for more than a year now. The virus brought much of the world to a standstill and has killed more than 550,000 people in the United States and more than 2.7 million people worldwide. The virus also brought the sports world to a halt, forcing the postponement or cancellation of events like the 2020 NCAA Tournament and the Kentucky Derby. The NBA, NHL, and Major League Baseball were all forced to delay and truncate their seasons.

Pro spots eventually bounced back and were able to resume. The NFL managed to complete its 2020 season in its entirety even if most games had few if any fans in attendance. The NBA and NHL finished their seasons in a bubble while Major League Baseball completed a shortened campaign.

One reason professional sports were able to resume play was the use of masks. Masks have been the primary defense against the coronavirus. They are inexpensive, easy to obtain, and quite effective at limiting the spread of the disease according to the Center for Disease Control \(CDC\).

The most effective masks available use new and exciting technology to help prevent dangerous particles of viruses and bacteria from reaching the person wearing them. They often contain antimicrobial silver which can be a big help in increasing the effectiveness of the mask.

Filters are another way that masks can be made more effective at preventing the spread of Covid-19 and other diseases. The most effective masks use filters that feature a high-efficiency particle air filter or HEPA filter.

We have seen numerous professional sports teams and athletes wearing masks when they are not involved in the game. The players use masks when they are in the team hotel when they are out in public and of course when they are on the bench and not playing in the game.

The use of masks by players in the NBA and NHL last season was critically important to minimize the number of Covid-19 cases inside the bubbles and allowed both leagues to finish their playoffs and crown a champion. There is no way LeBron James and the Los Angeles Lakers would have won the NBA title and the Tampa Bay Lightning led by Victor Hedman would have won the Stanley Cup without the proper precautions taken by the NBA and the NHL and that included the wearing of masks whenever possible.

Even during games this season, coaches and reserve players are seen on the bench wearing masks. This is a big reason that the 2020-21 seasons have been able to go ahead with minimal disruptions due to the Covid-19 pandemic.
