Racine received a $100,000 grant from the left-leaning Center for Tech and Civic Life (CTCL) in mid-2020. The grant was intended to help Racine recruit the mayors of four other urban areas – Madison, Milwaukee, Green Bay, and Kenosha. The so-called “Wisconsin 5” subsequently received over $6 million from CTCL in the form of grants that imposed strict conditions on the election process in those cities and led to the direct involvement of private activists in election administration activities, which the law entrusts to specific public officials.
