

Laura Meade of Prog Ensemble IZZ to Release New Solo Album 'The Most Dangerous Woman in America' on May 21, 2021

ASHEVILLE, NC, USA, April 22, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Laura Meade's new studio album, The Most Dangerous Woman in America, due on May 21, 2021 on Doone Records, marks Meade's follow up to her solo debut, 2018's Remedium and 2019's Don't Panic with New York progressive rock septet IZZ.

The Most Dangerous Woman in America, co-written with IZZ bandmate John Galgano between March and December of 2020, explores the story of a woman whose voice was silenced and whose story was all but forgotten by her own country.

"As we wrote the music and lyrics for this album, John and I realized that the concept and story that inspired us was not just the story of one woman, but also the story of all of those who stay true to themselves regardless of the cost," says Meade.

"There have been so many people throughout history – many of them women – who stand up for themselves, stand up for what they believe in, and experience great pain and suffering for doing so, their memories and voices lost along the way to gossip and rumor. I hope that this album, in some small way, honors and gives voice to the forgotten."

From the pulsing forward-momentum of "Leaving" to the majesty of "Iconoclast" to the mystery and passion of "Forgive Me," The Most Dangerous Woman in America explores the sincerity, emotion, and authenticity that so often lie beyond the gossip and sensationalism of fame and celebrity.
