Brief Overview of Arbitration.

Brief Overview of Arbitration

Arbitration is a process where people who are experiencing disagreements and disputes presents their arguments and facts in front of an arbitrator or an arbitration panel with the intention of attaining a victorious no-fault decision. According to Medghyne Calonge, anyone who agrees to enter the arbitration process will give the arbitrator full power to decide how the case will be settled. The arbitrator considers all facts and arguments presented by the parties and then declares a final decision. Medghyne Calonge also shared that arbitration is an adversarial process focused on fault and the outcome usually results in a win or lose kind of situation.

Medghyne Calonge Discusses When To Use Which Option

According to Medghyne Calonge when considering which option to utilize, it is wise to weigh the pros and cons. A few advantages to using mediation is that it is a private, confidential process, it is less expensive, the parties are in control, it is quicker than litigation, and it is a collaborative approach to problem solving.

A few disadvantages to using mediation is that all parties must agree, it may not result in a settlement, and it lacks predictability.

A few advantages to using arbitration is that it is less expensive, quicker than litigation, and more formal but still flexible. A few disadvantages to using arbitration is that it is adversarial, it has no predictability, and the arbitrator makes the final decisions.

According to Medghyne Calonge, If you are undecided on which alternative dispute resolution option to proceed with, then please note that it is crucially important to seek legal counsel for additional guidance. Working with an experienced legal professional is particularly important to make sure that you not only make the right decision regarding the appropriate dispute resolution process to select; but also, to assuring that your rights are protected.
