Remiara Eve stars as Arabella, a hot young author who's bound and determined to finish her latest novel during a getaway to her family's secluded cabin. Once there, she is confronted by what initially appears to be a malicious supernatural presence, only to learn that the apparition presenting itself is that of her dearly departed cousin, Vivian -- who was a writer herself amongst the living, but was sent to the spirit side as the result of an alleged suicide. However, Vivian insists that she was murdered, so she makes Arabella an offer: If she finds the killer, Vivian will finish Arabella's book for her. With the deadline looming and writers block at every turn, Arabella has no choice but to take the deal and find out the truth behind her cousin's suspicious death.

For this role, I held nothing back. The reason I got into acting was so that other people who are going through something similar to my character will feel less alone.”

producer on the film.

"For Arabella, the struggling writer, and Vivian, the ghost trapped between worlds, I feel that their circumstances are at least tangentially relatable, as we've all been in seemingly impossible spots at times." -- Joe Leone (Writer/Director)

During its festival run, Death Sentences scooped up "Best Atmosphere" at the Independent Horror Movie Awards. The film also won "Best Feature Writer" (Joe Leone), "Best Actress" (Remiara Eve), and "Best Thriller Feature" at the Accord Cine Fest.
