LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, May 12, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Volunteer Ministers of the Church of Scientology of Kaohsiung, Taiwan, shared the Scientology Tools for Life this Sunday with those attending a local Mother's Day festival.

People were curious about Scientology and inside their bright yellow tent, volunteers answered questions and toured guests through 19 panels, each containing a wealth of useful information.

The panels correspond to the chapters of the Scientology Handbook and 19 free online courses available in 18 languages including Chinese at Scientology.org/courses and through the Volunteer Ministers website. These practical tools were compiled from the research and discoveries of Scientology Founder L. Ron Hubbard at his direction to help people learn how to better conditions and thrive in their personal lives and careers.

One young man visiting the tent voiced concern about his parents. The whole time he was growing up, his mother and father fought with each other and their relationship only worsened as time went on. What he learned in his short visit with the Volunteer Ministers gave him hope that he can help them resolve their conflicts and restore harmony to the family.

The panel on creating a stable and happy marriage appealed to a man whose daughter had recently married. Other parents wanted more information on the technology of study to help their children at school.

In one part of the tent, volunteers were providing Scientology "assists"—techniques that bring relief by addressing the emotional and spiritual factors in stress and trauma. One man who decided to give it a try was really not expecting anything to happen. Suddenly, a chronic ache disappeared. He felt completely relaxed.

The bright yellow tent of the Volunteer Ministers of Kaohsiung and the help the volunteers provide is part of the community outreach that has earned the Church of Scientology numerous annual Excellent Religious Group Awards from the Minister of Interior for its contribution to the people of the country.
