WALNUT CREEK, CA, UNITED STATES, May 12, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- FIN Compliance, along with its partners Atlas Park and Elite Viviant, are on a mission to support virtual practices in light of the pandemic.

The future of work is here as the rise of virtual offices continues to alter the operations for many investment advisors – a trend already taking place in tech with firms such as Coinbase opting to eliminate its official headquarters.

We at FIN Compliance, along with our partners, exist to support growth in remote working as it evolves for firms due to the pandemic”

What’s next for investment management and remote working?

According to a 2021 Deloitte study on Investment Management practices, many firms are investing heavily in cloud-based and security technology in an effort to support remote working for its staff - a win for those who struggled to balance work commutes and family time.

“We at FIN Compliance, along with our partners, exist to support growth in remote working as it evolves for firms due to the pandemic – Founder, Cory Roberson.

To position owners for growth, she's created a 5-step roadmap that shows firms how to get task completed properly by having systems in place. Atlas Park and Cameo help its clients to clarify their business vision, organize operations, escape burnout, and save time! Cameo is also an editorial contributor for US News & World Report, FA Practice Management column and Atlas Park is a preferred coaching vendor within the Morgan Stanley network.
