announces the launch of its Carbon Neutral Beef and Chicken Point of Sale (POS) solution offering retailers a simple way for customers to mitigate part of their carbon footprint at the point of sale.

“Various beef and chicken suppliers have reached out asking how to allow choice at the register,” said Stephen H. Watkins, CEO of Entrex Carbon Market, a majority owned subsidiary of Entrex (OTC: UNSS).

“Working together with various beef and chicken producers, we believe we’ve structured a simple way for grocery retailers to give consumers the choice.”

“Paper, plastic or carbon neutral?” asked Thomas Harblin of Entrex Carbon Market. “Adding a simple question to what we hear every day at grocery store allows retailers to scan the carbon UPC code, collecting and offsetting their customers’ purchases. It’s simple while providing valued consumers the choice.”

“Our Manufacturer Representative program is finding all sorts of national and global opportunities,” continued Harblin. “Remaining responsive to their clients and contacts has been exciting. It seems every day we’re seeing new opportunities and ideas to mitigate carbon footprints.”
