Most Powerful Passports in 2021

The outbreak of COVID-19 caused travel restrictions, therefore affecting markets such as reducing the flourishing international travel. However, obtaining a second passport, a powerful one at that, grants freedom of movement to more than a hundred countries. A second passport further opens up more possibilities and improves the quality of life. Here, we look at the most powerful passports that offer no restrictions.

What is a strong passport?

The number of countries that you can enter without a visa defines the strength of the passport you hold. Meaning, the passports which offer highest mobility and visa free travel countries have a more powerful passport rank.

Citizenship by investment programs guarantee you a powerful second passport. Antigua & Barbuda, for example, is ranked 27th internationally and can give you access to more than 155 countries, granting you numerous benefits and opportunities including world-class healthcare and education.

COVID-19 impact on passports strength

The impact of the pandemic on mobility is considerably noticeable with restrictions all around us. This is shown as the Asian Pacific (APAC) region is now possessing the world's most powerful passports whereas this position was held by the U.S., UK and EU countries. Whether this remains the same or changes will depend on how various countries recover from the pandemic among other factors.

Citizens with powerful passports are welcomed by many countries without a visa, creating great possibilities and opportunities. For instance, Antigua & Barbuda second passport holders can open offshore bank accounts and expand their businesses greatly.
