

Danny Rebello, Co-Founder of TruTrade.IO, is the Subject of a New Exclusive Interview

The entrepreneur sat down for an in-depth discussion about his company's role in making digital trading more accessible and profitable for the average investor.

SCOTTSDALE , ARIZONA, UNITED STATES , May 27, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- It is with great pleasure that Danny Rebello, co-founder of the cutting-edge trading software company TruTrade.IO, announces he is the subject of a new exclusive interview. The interview, which was conducted by an online periodical, touches on topics ranging from the initial inspiration for creating TruTrade to what qualities make for a successful trader.

At the beginning of the interview, when asked where he and his co-founder got the idea for TruTrade.io, Rebello replies, "we saw a massive void in the industry." He elaborates, "There are a lot of companies out there that sell indicators, software and platforms that are useful. However, executing positions with precision and applying complex money management strategies on the fly is a daunting task for most traders. Without automation traders often find themselves late to the party or entering the market at the wrong time, and it is very difficult for the average trader to keep pace.

Further along in the interview, questioned as to what traits make a successful trader, Danny Rebello answers, "always wanting to understand why something didn't work. Most traders that are successful don't just rely on what's given to them. They always want to look and understand the markets. They always want to understand the ebbs and flows." Expanding his answer to include his company's specific place in the market, he adds, "In our case, it's price action and momentum that needs to be understood. Once they understand this, apply our automation, and understand the nuances of the software, that's when traders really excel with our software."
