

Celebrate World Ocean Day with a Deep Dive into the World's Majestic Ocean Reefs

Students from around the world will interact with renowned ocean experts and artists as they transmit from the Pacific and Grand Cayman

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, June 4, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Renowned ocean experts and artists at the Guy Harvey Ocean Foundation (GHOF) and Schmidt Ocean Institute (SOI) are hosting a World Ocean Day celebration that is open to the global community via Livestream on Tuesday, June 8 at 3 p.m. EST. Representatives from both organizations will interact with students from around the world and discuss the critical role that art plays in STEAM, the science behind Deep Sea Coral discovery and the findings and goal of the SOI's expedition in The Phoenix Islands – a group of eight atolls and two submerged coral reefs located in the central Pacific Ocean, north of Samoa.

Featuring ocean experts Dr. Guy Harvey (world-renowned marine artist, scientist & conservationist), Jessica Harvey (GHOF Project Manager), Dr. Randi Rotjan (Boston University Scientist), Dr. Carlie Wiener (SOI Director of Communications) and Constance Sartor (SOI Artist-At-Sea / Marine Scientist), this event is part of an ongoing educational collaboration between the SOI and the GHOF, a non-profit organization dedicated to saving the seas by supporting groundbreaking scientific research and helping foster the next generation of ocean stewards through education initiatives.

Viewers from around the world can join in on Facebook Live via @DrGuyHarvey, @SchmidtOcean, and @GuyHarveyOcean, LinkedIn Live via @DrGuyHarvey.
