Innovative Idaho Health Company*

MERIDIAN, ID, UNITED STATES, June 11, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Planet TV Studios is producing a healthcare documentary series called "New Frontiers" and will feature Idaho health company Microbe Formulas. The series is designed to explore cutting-edge healthcare organizations that are shaping the future of health management in our nation.

The documentary episodes will air on national television on Bloomberg TV, reaching 71 million viewers. It will also be available on-demand through Amazon Prime Video, Google Play, iTunes, Roku, and many other platforms.

Microbe Formulas, established in 2017, has set out to restore hope and health around the globe through producing all-natural herbal supplements, educational media, and guided wellness programs. The company began with two doctors who wanted to provide effective, natural solutions for gut health and detoxification.

Dr. Jay Davidson and Dr. Todd Watts, co-founders of Microbe Formulas, were drawn together through the commonality of personal unresolved health issues. This ultimately motivated them to dive into holistic medicine to find "solutions that work." Over time, the two doctors discovered the importance of drainage, gut health, and natural detox support.

The company has multiple innovative supplements to offer, as well as a 4-month protocol. In particular, two areas make them stand out: one, their flagship gut product Mimosa Pudica Seed and two, their proprietary BioActive Carbon technology within the majority of their supplements. Microbe's episode of "New Frontiers" will go into more detail on these special materials and their benefits, along with sharing stories of hope and health.

The air date for Microbe's episode is not yet determined.
