the car and the required actions needed to be taken. For instance, Scope technology, a US based Tech Company, has developed an AI automated vehicle inspection technology in collaboration with Microsoft's Azure cloud computation. ProovStation, a French automobile maintenance service provider, implemented these systems in their service centers in France and North America. They use the technology to conduct a 360 degree scan of the vehicle, identify the damages such as scratches, dents, dirt, suspension, frame, brakes and engine condition, and generate a report of the issues identified. The system generates a unique code and account for the vehicle with its chassis number for future service purposes. This entire visual inspection process is completed in less than 5 minutes and reduces costs by 50%.
