Campaign manager Evan Ridley said the team is receiving messages from volunteers ready to help Dr. Bud Pierce win the Republican nomination.

“Since Oregon is beginning to open up, people want to get involved in politics again. They are concerned about the direction the state is taking and want their voices heard,” Ridley adds.

While Ridley acknowledges that Dr. Pierce has a rigorous schedule as an oncologist, the candidate is anxious to visit Oregonians virtually and in person and to share his vision of a state that works for the people.

“Citizens need to hear Dr. Pierce’s ideas for solving the real issues on the minds of Oregonians like jobs, homelessness, and education reform. Hopefully, this will be the first of many regional headquarters we’ll have for the Bud Pierce for Governor campaign,” Ridley said.
