“Rainbow” is the first single from Josephson’s self-produced EP, Showin’ Up, which is planned for a Fall 2021 release. Inspiration for the song came from Josephson’s daughter coming home from a bad day at school after her best friend, at the time, told her to “find new friends”. That night, Josephson found inspiration from a lyric in an old Harry Chapin song, “There’s so many colors in the rainbow, so many colors in the morning sun, so many colors in the flowers, and I see everyone.” From the imagery and lyrics of, she wrote a song to remind people that “there’s no shame in shining when they rain on your parade”.

Josephson explains, “My hope is that this song is healing and empowering to all, to take pride in who you are, especially after the past year. The world is beyond beautiful when we embrace our rainbow of differences.”

Josephson recorded the song at Southern Ground, Sony Tree, and Blackbird Studios in Nashville and East-West Studios in Los Angeles. The single features Josephson’s eloquent vocals and background vocals from her daughter, Shira Josephson. The song was mixed by Grammy and Oscar-winning engineer, Brendan Dekora.
