

The Dreaded Phone Call: Dad Fell. Now What?

If you've had this phone call, or if you're worried about your aging parent falling, you won't want to miss Advice Chaser's latest educational webinar.

BLOOMINGTON, IN, UNITED STATES, July 6, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- When a parent attempts to age in place and remain independent at home, it can be difficult for adult children to manage their anxiety about the potential for injury. Falls are the leading cause of injury in people over 65, and one in three older adults will experience a serious one. After a fall, a senior may experience a permanent loss of mobility or independence. If you've had this phone call, or if you're worried about your parent falling, you won't want to miss Advice Chaser's latest educational webinar. This free online event takes place at 12:00 noon Eastern Time, on July 20. You can sign up here to reserve your place.

Advice Chaser, a matching service that connects individuals and businesses with trusted financial advisors, will host the webinar. We invited Annalee Kruger, founder of CareRight, Inc., to present this webinar. She has worked with seniors and their families for twenty-five years and is a nationally recognized expert on senior care. Ms. Kruger will share her knowledge on:

- Preventing a fall
- Being prepared for emergencies with a grab-and-go binder
- Deciding whether your parent can still live independently
- Vetting retirement communities for quality

"We always feel lucky when Annalee can share some of her time and wisdom with us," said Megan Coelho, president of Advice Chaser. "It can be terrifying when a parent falls, but with advance knowledge, families can weather this crisis gracefully. This webinar is essential for anyone caring for elderly relatives."
