-- Is this the most exclusive “Secure lock up and go” town house in the south of England ?

This classic rare Georgian Bishop Longlands Estate is coming on the market July 25th

In the centre of Henley famous for its 150 year old Royal Regatta

Fine & Country Henley-on-Thames are honoured to be launching an open day event on Sunday 25th July, Longlands house is considered to be the most desirable homes in Henley-on-Thames in the UK. Generously distributed over 4500 sq ft, this remarkable five bedroom Grade II* listed Georgian home also benefits from an additional 1200 sq ft two-bedroom self-contained cottage, a stunning roof terrace overlooking the River Thames and an impressive driveway that could comfortably accommodate ten vehicles.

Built in 1786 the quintessentially Georgian masterpiece maintains features of its period, such as cornice surrounding the high ceilings, focal point replaces, symmetrical sliding sash windows and window shutters. The basement, now purposed as a media room/wine bar, has a secret tunnel to the east chapel of St Mary’s Church. Beyond the secure gated entrance to the side of the property and the exquisite medieval brick and int high walls is the two-bedroom guest cottage dating back to the 15th century, although now consisting of contemporary décor it still retains its original beams and ingle nook replace with seven bread ovens.

Each of the five bedrooms of the main house have fantastic views overlooking either the private courtyard or Hart Street. Being situated just 120 yards from the River Thames, the incredible roof top terrace provides perfect viewing of the boats passing daily, some whilst following the yearly Royal Regatta Course.

It is certain that no expense has been spared in renovating this period property; its beauty, charm and location make Longlands House one of the best homes in the UK.

Henley second most pricey market town

HENLEY remains the second most expensive market town in England after Beaconsfield in Buckinghamshire, according to the Halifax.

The bank's latest research shows that homebuyers in market towns across England face paying a premium of 13 per cent on their county average.

Having fallen back in 2019 — when it was down 15.6 per cent on 2018 — the market town premium increased by 8.4 per cent, equivalent to £2,812, by the end of 2020.

Those looking to buy in these attractive locations will need to have an additional £36,116 on average, compared to those buying elsewhere in the same county — with the top 10 expensive market towns all coming in at over £500,000 for the average house price.

Premium: Russell Galley

managing director Russell Galley said: "England's beautiful historic market towns are enduringly popular, which can bring a heavy price tag for prospective buyers.

"Market towns offer so much for house buyers, including rich history, period properties, green spaces, and tourism.
