RockDove Solutions*

and RockDove Solutions today announced a new strategic relationship to bring the combined capabilities of their technologies and platforms to customers worldwide who want to reduce their exposure to an all-hazards set of threats.

“Our customers are looking for solutions that allow them to identify, prepare for and respond quickly to emerging threats,” said Chris Britton, COO of RockDove Solutions. “By connecting our In Case of Crisis 365 software platform to Swan Island’s TX360 threat intelligence and situational awareness service, we can deliver an easy to adopt, reliable, budget-friendly way to meet the growing list of risks organizations face today. TX360 provides our customers a very powerful and flexible way to support the identification of emerging threats and is the perfect complement to the In Case of Crisis 365 platform.”

“RockDove’s In Case of Crisis platform provides organizations a seamless path from an emerging threat to proactive incident management,” said Pete O’Dell, CEO of Swan Island Networks. “Early detection and mitigation of events has continually proven to save lives, protect property, ensure brand viability and assist with operational continuity. We look forward to delivering this comprehensive, all-hazards solution.”

In recent years, corporations have seen a steady, pronounced increase in the number, types, and severity of threats worldwide. Proactive monitoring and well-planned response is a major factor in preventing loss of life, damage to property and reputation, and continuity of operations. SOCS (Security Operations Centers) continually seek to increase their vigilance through expanded coverage and deployment of technology. The TX360/In Case of Crisis 365 confederated solution will provide new levels of timely, actionable intelligence in a user-friendly, team-friendly format.
