In Place of War is a global organisation that uses artistic creativity in places of conflict as a tool for positive change. The registered charity enables a network of more than 100 grassroots change-makers in music, theatre and across the arts, to transform cultures of violence and suffering into hope, opportunity and freedom in 26 countries across Africa, Latin America and the Middle East. The organisation works with an array of international figures from the arts as ambassadors, counting Run The Jewels, Laurie Anderson and Brian Eno, amongst its Fellows. More information about the charity's projects, from the creation of global supergroup, GRRRL, featuring women of colour from international conflict zones, to the transformation of a funeral parlour in South Africa into a recording studio, to tackling the stigma of disability in Uganda through community theatre, can be found on the In Place of War Case Studies page. More can be read about the organisation's exciting current projects, including the release of an album, featuring the work of iconic artists such as Brian Eno, created from field recordings to preserve the sounds of the Colombian rainforest, and the In Place of War Covid Emergency Fund here.

Ruth Daniel, CEO, In Place of War, says, "After seeing people come together in extraordinary ways during the challenging period we've all been living through, now seems the perfect moment to look forward to an opportunity to form a community in solidarity with those who need our support. So we're beyond excited about launching Around The World in 80 Raves. It's a huge undertaking that wouldn't be possible without the incredible support of our partners, including the phenomenal DJ talent playing for us. We can't wait to welcome members of the public to take part in the sponsored challenge, which will contribute so much to our overall goals to fund two life-changing music projects in the Global South. I truly want to thank everyone involved."

The project is being supported by global DJ decks and gear manufacturer, Pioneer DJ. Keleigh Batchelor, Marketing Manager, Pioneer DJ, says, "We couldn't be more thrilled to support this unique and worthy cause to help fund the development of two additional properties for IPOW, offering critical and essential support to communities. There are some incredible prizes up for grabs as you rave away. Challenge yourself, challenge your friends and most of all fundraise with us!"
