

Clean Sweep: A Novel Tackles Homelessness with Warmth, Compassion, and Brutal Honesty

Connecticut Native pens debut novel with July 20, 2021 release by Little Brown Dog Press

PINEHURST, NORTH CAROLINA, UNITED STATES, July 20, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As debut author E. B. Lee writes in Clean Sweep: A Novel, "No one says, 'When I grow up, I want to live in a cardboard box on a sidewalk.'" Through the pages of this new release of contemporary fiction, Lee presents a heartrending story and grim realities of individual lives on the streets, backstories, and the compassionate efforts of others reaching out to these vulnerable souls. By the final pages, readers will be rooting for promising outcomes, and will be searching their own souls for answers to the serious issues of homelessness in America.

"Now, more than ever," says Lee, "we must give significant thought to how we, as a society and as a country, will better meet the needs of individuals facing poverty, addictions, mental health issues, and other health issues. This requires a good look at the big picture, but we must also recognize that this is a real-life story of individuals. So, Clean Sweep looks at these issues from a very individualized standpoint and with the hope that readers will be emotionally drawn to the characters by our natural tendency toward human connection. To my thinking, Clean Sweep is a must read because it matters."

In 2020, Lee traded colorful flowers for colorful words when she left a decade of flower farming to turn to writing as a means of impacting others. Prior to that, she worked in the environmental field. Lee earned a Masters Degree from Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies (now renamed Yale School of the Environment) and an undergraduate degree from Yale College. She now writes in the New York metro region and North Carolina. Lee grew up in Weston, CT.
