About Zevorie Studio

Terri started designing digital products when she was faced with a very real problem. As a jewelry designer for the last 10 years, she noticed that there were next to no digital business products that were marketed to designers and those in the fashion industry. She remembered how disappointed that she would be to find that something was only for service-based or digital product business models.

That's why she strived to create products that were not only designed for the e-commerce industry but specifically for fashion-based entrepreneurs. After many years of searching for help with her organizational needs, Terri finally cracked the code and figured things out for herself. That's when other designers started noticing and asked how she did it. That's why she's happy to create digital organizational products for her fellow designers.
