The Redmond Food Processor Vegetable Chopper is electric with a two-liter glass bowl for chopping, mincing, pureeing, and even peeling garlic. With a handy special attachment that comes with the product, there's no need to fuss with the smell of garlic on the fingertips. Designed with the company's signature modern look, the product can also become a baby food maker in shades of cream-white and light-cyan.

So how does it work? With two speeds and a 350W motor, four sharp stainless steel blades are activated by two control buttons. The food processor for small to medium food prep has a self-cleaning mode when set on high speed with the addition of warm water and a drop of dish soap. A rubber ring at the bottom of the mixing bowl will keep the vegetable chopper from moving on the kitchen counter when the machine is in use.

Happy customer Pag Gray said, "This is a great food processor, powerful enough to grind meat as well. The bowl is pretty large and holds a lot of ingredients. I mainly use it for chopping onions and nuts. Saves a lot of time during cooking."

Redmond's product line includes toasters, mixers, blenders, coffee grinders, makers, kettles, cookware sets, and appliances for sous vide.
