

Quikteks Tech Support Encourages Businesses to Perform Periodic Security Reviews from an Experienced IT Professional

Leading business technology provider enables clients to mitigate risks of ransomware and other threats

FAIRFIELD, NEW JERSEY, UNITED STATES, August 10, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Quikteks Tech Support, a leading business technology solutions provider based in New Jersey, today issued guidance to businesses, recommending that companies conduct periodic security reviews. The increase in serious cyber threats, such as ransomware and “supply chain” attacks, make it essential that all businesses adopt a robust security program that aligns with their business goals and resources. Ideally, an experienced IT professional should perform the review.

You have to stay on top of your technology security, to whatever extent you can. Leaving boxes unchecked could be fatal.”

Andrew Rich, CEO

“Cybersecurity risks are growing more serious, with the potential for a successful attack to paralyze a business and even threaten its ability to survive as a going concern,” said Quikteks President and CEO Andrew Rich. “You have to stay on top of your technology security, to whatever extent you can. Leaving boxes unchecked could be fatal. This is the problem we solve with our affordable managed security service. You don’t have to hire an expensive staff resource to strengthen your security posture.”

For Rich and other security professionals, the events of the last six months provide ample, and highly alarming evidence of a significant acceleration in the threat environment. From the Colonial Pipeline ransomware attack that shut down fuel delivery for tens of millions of people to the Kaseya ransomware attack that affected nearly 1,400 companies, it’s clear that business survival is at stake. When supply chain attacks like the SolarWinds hack are factored into the analysis, it is also apparent that cyber threats can damage broad ecosystems of companies, their customers and suppliers.
