announced the addition of four new markets today, adding millions of homes to its growing footprint across North America.

Each Bring it Home Community adds extraordinary value to the local marketplace, matching brokers and their agents to a new source of home buyer and seller leads, while providing valuable, market-specific information to consumers.

The lead-generation tools, added exposure and advertising revenue, as well as a truly unique differentiator are huge benefits for us”

Tony Martinez, Broker-owner of Xtreme International Realty in South Florida

The new markets include Boston, San Bruno, Miami and Fort Lauderdale, joining Chicago, Las Vegas, Orlando, Pleasanton, Orange County (CA) and Colorado Springs.

“This gives us a huge opportunity,” states Tony Martinez, Broker-owner of Xtreme International Realty in South Florida. “The lead-generation tools, added exposure and advertising revenue, as well as a truly unique differentiator are huge benefits for us,” Martinez explains.

Boston broker Gary Sund agrees. “This is something that makes great business sense on so many levels. The leads the website generates are all coming straight to us, without fees or a pay-per-lead competitive situation.”

Broker Mayra Espinosa will lead the charge with Bring it Home Communities San Bruno.

John Giaimo, President and CEO, says he’s not surprised by the accelerated traction he’s receiving. “This is something that makes sense on every level. We’re working to roll-out Bring it Home Communities across the country, and these early adaptors will really benefit.
