

Comedian Lori Hamilton beats the heat by staying creative

Summer didn't slow her down

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, August 6, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Summer is a sluggish time of year for a lot of people. Many schools go on break, working professionals use their vacation time to travel and spend time with their families. For New York comedian and producer Lori Hamilton, beating the sweltering summer heat is a matter of creativity.

The artist has spent the last year creating award-winning content in the face of overwhelming circumstances and the global challenges of the pandemic. Now, as summer continues to bring record-breaking temperatures, she is using the time indoors to work on new projects.

I love doing creative work and am so grateful for all the positive response.”

creator/producer*

Her animation series, "Project Spudway," has been recognized by film festivals and competitions around the world for its timely messages of kindness and acceptance, as well as its creative humor. "Potato Family," the first installment, won awards at the Best Shorts Competition, the Couch Film Festival, and the New York International Film Awards. The follow-up, "Project Spudway," also won an at the Best Shorts Competition and the Couch Film Festival.

Both shorts feature characters learning lessons about body positivity, acceptance, and having the courage to follow your dreams. Hamilton is now working on the next installment of the series, so stay tuned to find out what life lessons will be learned through animated potatoes next.

In addition to continuing her "Project Spudway" series, Hamilton is also working on three new projects. Two stand-alone short films and a new series.
