"There is a greater need than ever for change, innovation, and transformation of organizations to the public cloud. In the face of rising challenges and increasing demand for cloud, only service providers with end-to-end transformational capabilities across cloud-native application development, cloud engineering services, and managed services to provide cloud workloads, can enable and drive successful business outcomes," said Swarraj Kulkarni, CTO, MediaAgility.

"This recognition validates our vision that clients today need end-to-end services that enable their continuous transformation. Cloud migration and managed services alone are no longer sufficient as companies discover the power of cloud-native technologies. We continue to innovate on our agile service delivery model to build new cloud-native applications, data analytics solutions, and continuous modernisation of the existing stack. We are excited to be part of the global providers in this 2021 Gartner® Magic Quadrant™ that recognises our completeness of vision," said Rajesh Abhyankar, CEO, MediaAgility.

"In the global markets, we are experiencing significant demand for our core capabilities; in cloud-native technologies paired with our elastic services model. We cut down on the time-to-market with our repeatable solutions, scaling our global digital expertise and digital transformation. It is an exciting time for all of us to be an enabler for this massive shift to the new digital architecture," he further adds.
