“Contrary to mainstream media, I believe black men are positioned to experience unprecedented levels of success in America,” Taylor said. “What has been missing is a resource that supports them in learning how to create extraordinary lives. This is the problem I am daring to solve with my Shatter the Stereotypes platform. It fills that unfilled need for black men.”

With all of the racial tension due to police brutality and racism, black men need reasons for hope and optimism to support their journeys to creating extraordinary lives. The 12-session online summit reveals the unquestionable and undeniable truth that everyone is capable of living a successful life. It is possible to cut through racism and discrimination, change old mindsets, and find the keys to success.

Taylor said, "There has never been a better time to be alive on the planet, and my message of optimism and possibilities is what black men and the world needs right now."
