BOCA RATON, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, August 12, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The Patrick Maddren Scholarship and Patrick Henry Maddren Scholarship committees are pleased to announce they are now accepting applications from students in need of financial assistance in their pursuit of furthering their education at an accredited college or university.

Today, many students work tirelessly to excel academically, but still worry about how they'll be able to afford college. The Patrick Henry Maddren Scholarship is the result of a commitment to aiding dedicated students by alleviating a portion of the financial burden associated with college.

Likewise, the Patrick Maddren Scholarship is an exceptional opportunity for students seeking financial aid to complete their college education, develop leadership qualities, and build professional networks. Guided by the knowledge that higher education costs in the United States are out of reach for many students who are coming from low-income families, Patrick Henry Maddren has instituted these scholarships for students with a dedication to achieve their educational and career aspirations.

"Both the Patrick Maddren Scholarship and the Patrick Henry Maddren Scholarship each award a scholarship to 2 students annually," says a spokesperson for the committees. "The most recent recipients of the Patrick Maddren Scholarship are Alexis Freeman of Hawaii Pacific University and Uyioghosa 'James' Ebomoyi of DePaul University. The most recent recipients of the Patrick Henry Maddren Scholarship are Amelio Lo of Harvard College and Moira Dinkins of Boston College.”

At their core, both awards are given to students who exemplify a commitment to academic excellence. To be eligible, students must be a U.S.-based student with a good academic record and who also demonstrates leadership qualities in and out of school.
