Dr. Vanessa Bouche, co-founder of Savhera said, "We're proud to join the ranks of global leaders such as American Airlines, Sabre Corporation, NEC Corporation, and others who are modeling the important role the private sector plays in combatting human trafficking."

Savhera is a premium wellness and lifestyle brand that forges a pathway to freedom and economic independence for women who have overcome sex trafficking. Through restorative employment and other services and benefits, Savhera offers the economic justice that so many survivors of sex trafficking need but face difficulty obtaining due to inexperience, lack of education, or having a criminal record.

"We're excited to share resources and practices with other Texas businesses to combat human trafficking," said Bouché. "Everyone has a role to play, and we encourage other businesses to join this partnership and multiply the impact. We're stronger together!"
