Surge in demand for commercial aircrafts with increased air passenger traffic and emergence of chrome free-technology drive the growth of the global aerospace coatings market. However, fluctuating raw material prices are anticipated to restrain the growth of the market. Furthermore, growing investment on military aviation from government of developing economies such as China and India is expected to create new growth opportunities for the market players during the forecast period.

Covid-19 scenario:

- Major aerospace coatings manufacturers across the globe have halted their production activities due to disrupted supply of raw materials such as epoxy and polyurethane resins amid the lockdown.
- The demand for aerospace coatings is expected to decline during the Covid-19 pandemic as commercial and military aircraft manufacturers such as Boeing, Airbus, and Lockheed Martin have halted the production of new aircrafts.

- Ongoing military tensions between the developing economies such as India and China have led to increase in acquisition and development of new military aircrafts, due to which, the demand for aerospace coatings is anticipated surge in these countries.
