As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the purchase behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Market Trends

The expanding tourism and hospitality sectors are primarily driving the luxury hotel market across the globe. Furthermore, the growing preferences for weekend getaways among the working population and their changing lifestyle patterns are also propelling the market growth. Additionally, the escalating demand for staycations and weekend trips in luxury hotels for remote working is further augmenting the global market. Besides this, increasing social media penetration and rising collaborations between hotels and influencers are also catalyzing the product demand. Several other factors, such as the rising expenditure capacities of the consumers and the growing development of eco-friendly luxury hotels, are anticipated to further propel the luxury hotel market over the forecasted period.
