Market Trends:

The increasing Muslim population across the globe, along with their rising disposable incomes, have resulted in the increased consumption of meat. This has augmented the demand for global halal certification of food products, thereby creating a positive outlook for the market. Additionally, several manufacturers are expanding their product portfolios by introducing multiple value-added food items, such as burgers, hot dogs, soups, cookies, etc., to cater to the diverse tastes of the global Muslim population. Moreover, the growing penetration of e-commerce platforms, offering easy payment options and a wide range of halal-certified food products, is also augmenting the market growth. Besides this, the rising popularity of halal food among the non-Muslim consumers as a mark of food hygiene and reliability will continue to further propel the global halal food market in the coming years.
