PHOENIX, ARIZONA, USA, September 7, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- IT Executive Coaching and Business Solutions company ITeffectivity is expanding by adding award-winning technology executive Allyson Stuart to the team. Ms. Stuart is augmenting this woman-owned business as an IT Executive Advisor. Bringing over 35 years of both in-depth IT experience and people program implementations to the company, Stuart operates in a dual capacity by supporting ITeffectivity's IT Women's Mastermind, IT Executive Coaching, Group Coaching, Team Coaching and High-Potential Leadership programs. She also works directly with clients in building strategies and enhancing their IT service management functions including Quality Engineering, Change, Problem and Incident Management and Technology Risk Management. ITeffectivity founder, long-term chief information officer and ICF accredited Executive Advisor and Coach Mary Patry recruited Stuart for her innate skills as a global leader and her experience in the financial services and medical and hi-tech industries.

Allyson Stuart, IT Executive Advisor

Patry said, "Upon meeting Allyson, I quickly realized she would make a fantastic long-term IT coach and advisor. Allyson has the perfect combination of both industry and mentoring experience and natural intuition about what is best for her organization and those she advises. Time and time again, she demonstrates that her main goal is to be the best possible leader she can be for her people, which is what I admire about her most. I am honored to bring Allyson on board the ITeffectivity team and thrilled to see how her experience and insight improve the lives and careers of those she advises."

Stuart boasts an extensive background in her field, previously serving as a Chief Quality Officer, Technology Risk Regulatory Officer, Divisional Chief Information Security Officer and head of various people programs for companies such as Refinitiv (an LSEG Company), Deutsche Bank, UBS and Credit-Suisse. She earned 23 international awards for her work in technology
