Functional Apparel Market

Functional apparel refers to garments that can perform multiple functions.

They are made by using comfortable and flexible materials, such as polyester, nylon, and viscose, that ensure workability, comfort, and desired functional performance. Manufacturers incorporate replicable technologies that protect the end-product against temperature fluctuations, ultraviolet (UV) light, microbes, while blocking radiations. Consequently, they are extensively utilized to manufacture medical, leisure, and sports clothing.

As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the industry behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Functional Apparel Market Trends:

The rising health consciousness and the increasing inclination toward physical fitness activities are primarily escalating the demand for functional apparel across the globe. In line with this, continuous brand collaborations with fitness influencers to create awareness regarding the health benefits of an active lifestyle are further catalyzing the market growth. Moreover, the use of engineered fabrics in functional apparel protects the wearer against environmental conditions, chemicals, and radiations, which, in turn, is fueling their demand across the construction and mining sectors. Rapid technological advancements and the introduction of innovative product variants, such as clothing made from nano and microfibers with comfortable padding, are further creating a positive outlook for the market.
