Paper cups are disposable containers made to serve food and beverages such as tea, coffee, soft drinks, soups, etc. These cups usually contain a plastic/wax coating to retain flavor and prevent the paper from getting wet. They are also durable, temperature-resistant, odorless, and available in various shapes and sizes for specific purposes. Additionally, since paper cups do not require cleaning and can be easily discarded after use, they are widely preferred because of sanitation and hygiene consciousness.

The rising on-the-go consumption of beverages based on hectic work schedules and sedentary lifestyles of the consumers is primarily driving the paper cup market. Moreover, the growing awareness towards the environmental damage caused by plastic cups is further catalyzing the demand for eco-friendly alternatives, such as paper cups. Besides this, due to the increasing consciousness of consumers regarding cleanliness and hygiene, there is a growing shift in preferences towards from reusable variants towards disposable paper cups. Furthermore, the rising adoption of the product in takeaway food services, drive-in cafes, coffee shops, etc., is expected to further propel the global market for paper cups during the forecast period.
