The extractable/leachable testing services segment is expected to dominate the bioprocess validation market. The substantial share of this segment can be associated to the presence of regulatory orders and guidelines concerning the measurement of extractable and leachable. Growing outsourcing of testing services by biopharmaceutical manufacturers; the developing requirement for product safety, identity, purity, and quality; and the rising risk of product contamination. Based on end-users the market is segmented into biotechnology, pharmaceuticals & CDMO. The pharmaceutical companies are the major user of the bioprocess validation. The process component segment includes bioreactor and filter elements. Among the process component segment the bioreactor has the most significant market share of the market.
