Austin-Based Custom Gear Company Signs A Multi-Year Partnership With The ACC / NCAA D1 Swim Team

AUSTIN, TEXAS, USA, September 9, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Delfina Athletics signs a multi-year partnership becoming University of Miami's official swimwear supplier for the 2021-2023 seasons. The Austin-based company is making big waves in the aquatic space, designating itself as a premier swim gear option for athletes everywhere. Led by multi-time Olympian swimmer Nina Sadauskas, Delfina Athletics is proud to celebrate its partnership with the University of Miami, a notable force to be reckoned with in both national and global waters.

Led by head coach Andy Kershaw, over the last few years the University of Miami has been consistently improving their ACC and NCAA ranking, setting up the foundation for new and unprecedented heights for the program. Currently in his eighth year as head swimming coach, Kershaw is no stranger to the Olympic drive for success, previously holding the title of head manager for USA Swimming team at both the 2016 Rio Games and the 2012 Games in London. But, like any good coach, he knows that excellence starts before his athletes even enter the pool, which is why the University's partnership with Delfina means more than just providing his team with the highest quality gear, it means setting a new precedent for the athletes both inside and outside of the pool.

"Whether in competition or practice, our first priority is to make sure that our athletes are in a competitive product. I have no doubt that Delfina provides that superior product for us and does so in a customizable suit that will be recognizable all over the world," reflects Kershaw. "Knowing that the suits are also sustainable, made from recycled fishing nets, makes us even more proud to partner with the company! These suits represent something larger than ourselves, they represent the future, and that falls in line with many initiatives that our entire athletic
