HEADLINES

Think in headlines, i.e. if a post were in a newspaper, what wouldn't it be? as an example, '5 Top Tips to make Creative Content'. Always aim for active headings, not passive. Something that may evoke curiosity or emotion.

Make it concise and Make it catchy. Alliteration is often a fun way to achieve this.

INTRODUCTION

The intro should attract attention and sum up the best theme of the story. Make it short and snappy. Less is simpler. The abstract to an enquiry paper. Really attempt to dig deep and entice the viewer with good content or useful information.

EYE-CATCHING QUOTES

While writing a lengthier article use quotes within the main body or create some powerful phrases for instance key points to be used across. Any good website will feature this method too. However, take care when using quotes or illustrations. Remember to reference or gain authority for licence use to avoid any copyright or plagiarism disputes.

ENGAGEMENT

Leave the readers wanting more. Ask an open question or drop by a final thought to ponder. Customer satisfaction is the utmost priority so, make the effort to answer any questions or interact with people that leave comments.

FLOW AND FORM

Read the draft and check sentences. How does it flow? Does it take on a stimulating journey or does one feel bogged down? Is there a spot that needs fine-tuning? Get into the rhythm of writing. It makes an enormous difference.

Ultimately, there's no correct way. Over time algorithms change so can we as content creators. The simplest thing to do as a content creator is to make. Throw things at the wall and see what sticks. Try various sorts of media and topics. Keep reading and interact with other fellow bloggers. Build a community.
