“Our customers love the Lil' Baby line,” says James Lindsay, Founder and CEO of Rap Snacks, the only snack brand that features A-list hip-hop artists on its packaging. “With the additional distribution through Walmart, we have the opportunity to meet that demand. We're grateful for the partnership and look forward to adding additional products in the coming months.”

About Rap Snacks

Rap Snacks was developed by CEO James Lindsay in 1994 and celebrated a relaunch in 2017.

By partnering with some of the rap game's most recognizable names such as Cardi B, Migos, Lil Boosie, Master P and Romeo and more, the brand has become one of the most visible hip-hop geared snack products over the last few decades. Rap Snacks has been featured on the CBS Morning Show, The Jimmy Kimmel Show, BET, Forbes and more. Most recently Rap Snacks has branched into beverages, having launched a 5-flavored lemonade line with Lil' Baby to debut in the Fall. Rap Snacks are sold in major retail stores across America, including Walmart, Kroger, and Target stores, among other outlets
