

From Slavery to Stock Market Founder Petitions Oldest Civil Rights Organization for a New Black National Anthem

Black Americans need a more transformational and revolutionary national anthem. We need a change. We need more Harriet Tubmans!

CHAPEL HILL, NC, US, September 30, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Ali Braswell believes that a new Black National Anthem is needed for Black Americans and has launched an online petition and distributed a letter dated September 12, 2021 to NAACP Headquarters in Baltimore, Maryland and twenty state branches. She requested that the organization endorse the song, "Stand Up" by Cynthia Erivo and begin playing and singing it at future events.

“Is there a need for a Black National Anthem?
Absolutely! And maybe it's time for a new one!"

"...I believe that Black Americans need a more actionable and empowering national anthem – one that motivates them to fight for their own freedoms and reach back to help other Black Americans do the same," said Ms. Braswell in her letter to the NAACP. "Stand Up" is the featured song from the 2019 movie, Harriet, which tells the story of the heroic abolitionist, Harriet Tubman. That movie grossed over $40 million at the domestic box office, a rarity for specialty biographical dramas. And 49% of that revenue came from Black people.

Ms. Braswell went on to say, "...in light of the recent backlash and controversy over Vanessa Williams singing 'Lift Every Voice and Sing' during the annual PBS 'A Capitol Fourth' special and the NFL adding it to their major football broadcasts for the current season amid further backlash, I suggest that we give those who would oppose a unified and stronger Black community a more substantial reason for their agitation. Is there a need for a Black National Anthem? Absolutely! And maybe it's time for a new one!"
