Magnuszewski will build a suite of innovative products and offerings for clients, form viewpoints around emerging technologies, and build an infrastructure for innovation.

Magnuszewski will also continue to advise on digital transformation strategies for clients.

"I see opportunities for innovation that will build on the only metric that matters at Infused Innovations — creating business results for our clients," Magnuszewski said. "I believe we have an opportunity to take innovation to the next level of impact by delivering results beyond just technology."

"In every aspect of the business, the firm is thinking about what's of the now, what's next, and how these trends can transform our clients' businesses," he said. "Experimentation, embracing technology, and thinking outside of the box are in the company's DNA, and we're looking forward to leaning further into those core strengths."

"While contemplating the role of our first Chief Innovation Officer, it was important to have someone who can apply the very latest thinking in the innovation landscape to our clients," said Jeff Wilhelm, the firm's CEO. "After discussing this with Phil, it was evident that he was the right person for this role. As someone who thinks outside the box and is truly passionate about emerging technologies, Phil has an enormous amount of knowledge in this space while also
