

Author Michelle Deerwester-Dalrymple Releases a Gem, The BlackGuard of the Glen

by Fran Briggs

NEW YORK CITY, NY, USA, October 7, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In just three years, Michelle Deerwester-Dalrymple has given readers at least 30 reasons to smile—one for every book she has written. The California author has released The BlackGuard of the Glen: A Steamy

Michelle’s imagination is exceptional. When combined with her poignant, complex, and vastly entertaining writing style, she is able to write one masterpiece after another.”

Highlander Medieval Scottish Historical Romance Novel her publicist announced today. The publication is anticipated to become a best seller and is available at <https://books2read.com/blackguard>.

The Blackguard of the Glen is the 8th and final book from her Glen Highland Romance series. Like the seven novels which precede it, The Blackguard of the Glen is well written. From page one readers will be entertained by how the author brilliantly intertwines authentic Scottish history with a lightly fictional narrative.

James Douglas prides himself on his uncanny military strategy over the English Sassenachs and finds himself at the right hand of King Robert, the Bruce of Scotland. It isn't long before the king and his kinsmen worry about his darker side consuming him. The king finds an ideal solution: get Douglas a wife to help ground him and salve his soul.

“Michelle’s imagination is exceptional. When combined with her poignant, complex, and vastly entertaining writing style, she is able to write one masterpiece after another,” stated Fran Briggs, Publicist to Michelle Deerwester-Dalrymple. “The Blackguard of the Glen is no exception. She does a superb job with depiction as her characters intersect through peril, pain, power and romance.”

Deerwester-Dalrymple says she has always been intrigued by history be it in books, films, museums, or other formats. However, Scottish history in particular occupies a certain place in her heart.

Speaking on how she conceived the idea for the Glen Highland Scottish romance series, Michelle Deerwester-Dalrymple responded, "I love writing real figures from history into my books. The idea came after reading several Scottish romance novels and doing research on my Scottish last name. Focusing on James Douglas, King Robert the Bruce's second in command, was ideal. I fell in love with him and all his mystery the more I read about him."

Deerwester-Dalrymple takes her history seriously. She took the time to research and reach out to Scottish historians to ensure the accuracy of the period.

"I did enough research to make the story workable," she explained. "I was fortunate enough to have a history scholar/reader comb through the book before it was published."
