Human Insulin Market by Types (Traditional Human Insulin, Premixed Traditional, Intermediate Acting, Modern Human Insulin, Premixed Modern, Long Acting, Rapid Acting)”
Allied Market Research

The growth of global human insulin market is primarily attributed to rising prevalence of diabetes. The factors that contribute to growing number of diabetic patient globally include changes in lifestyles, growing number of obese as well as geriatric population and inadequate healthcare services. Favorable government policies and technological advances such as innovation of insulin pens have also fueled the growth of this market. However, cost of production, manufacturing complexities and critical regulatory requirements for the approval of biotechnology derived products are the factors that could hinder the growth of global human insulin market. Pipeline insulin products and untapped emerging economies are the promising opportunities for the manufacturers of global human insulin.
