Allied Market Research

The global market of weight loss management is primarily driven by factors such as increasing incidence of the overweight child population and obese adult population, increasing expenditure on health and fitness products coupled with the increasing popularity of healthy organic food. Moreover, rising health and fitness consciousness amongst women would largely contribute to the market growth. Various government authorities in the developed and developing economies have played a vital role in enhancing the quality of living coupled with the changing mindset of the population, which has brought the weight loss management industry into the limelight. Despite several advantages, the consumer's preference towards natural weight loss techniques and availability of alternative prescription medicines might hamper the market growth.
