Further key findings from the report suggest

- Healthcare is estimated to emerge as an important end-use in the hydrolyzed beef collagen market. Increasing demand for premium grade product for surgical procedures, wound dressing, and drug delivery mechanisms are driving the market upwards over the forecast period. The rising medical and health-related issues have led to the increasing applications in pharmaceutical industry.

- Hydrolyzed bovine collagen is utilized in improving the condition of leaky gut, due to consumer's unawareness for any ingestion of crappy food, food sensitivity, or high level of stress. These factors might damage the inner lining of intestinal tissues leading to leaky gut, which results in foreign particles entering into the bloodstream, thus increasing the chance of any autoimmune disease. Since collagen is used in connecting tissues, consumption of hydrolyzed bovine collagen can heal leaky gut.
- Online channels are witnessing a rise in demand due to the growth in e-commerce portals as the key selling medium among consumers. It also has the additional benefit of value-added services and cash-on-deliver (COD) and coupon benefits.
- Asia Pacific regional segment is projected to register the highest CAGR. Factors associated for this growth is the growing geriatric population, improved healthcare infrastructure, and favorable government policies. High consumption of cosmetics in countries such as Japan and South Korea are also adding to the market share.
