Horizon will use the Mediledger Network to bring trading partners together, improving alignment on customer and contract data that can then be used by the blockchain to automatically enforce chargeback accuracy. Horizon's use of blockchain within the MediLedger Network reaffirms its commitment to identifying innovative technology that will create value for partners and, most importantly, patients.

"MediLedger's customer access management will provide us with a ground-breaking opportunity to provide a deeper patient-centered approach," said Chris Giessinger, vice president, U.S. trade and distribution, Horizon. "We value Chronicled's commitment to ensuring our partnership's success." The Mediledger Network offers a Roster Management solution to establish a unified view of customer identity data from the HIN, DEA, 340B and other ID databases through blockchain. This eliminates much of the misalignment on customer identity that can lead to chargeback and pricing inaccuracy.
