SHERIDAN, WYOMING, UNITED STATE, October 12, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- According to the latest report by IMARC Group "Medical Device Cleaning Market: Global Industry Trends, Share, Size, Growth, Opportunity and Forecast 2021-2026", The global medical device cleaning market reached a value of US$ XX Billion in 2020. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to grow at a CAGR of XX% during 2021-2026.

Medical device cleaning stands for the process of removing soils and foreign particles from the surface of an object used for any medical purpose. It is generally performed before high-level disinfection and sterilization processes, as any material remaining on the surface of a medical instrument can interfere with its effectiveness during examinations or operations. Some examples of commonly used cleaners include ultrasonic, washer-disinfector, washer-decontaminators, sterilizers, etc.

Note: We are regularly tracking the direct effect of COVID-19 on the market, along with the indirect influence of associated industries. These observations will be integrated into the report.

Market Trends:

The use of nebulizers, ventilators, infusion equipment, pulse oximeters, etc., is rising worldwide due to the spread of coronavirus disease (COVID-19). This represents one of the primary factors fueling the demand for medical device cleaning equipment to reduce risks of cross-contamination. Moreover, the rates of numerous surgeries are also witnessing tremendous growth across the globe. This is further attributed to the escalating number of accidents, growing prevalence of chronic diseases, expanding geriatric population, etc. Additionally, health agencies of several nations are also undertaking various projects and campaigns to promote the proper cleaning of medical devices. Besides this, several key players are engaging in mergers and acquisitions (M&A) to produce different innovative products, which will continue to further catalyze the medical device cleaning market in the coming years.
