Nature as the Driving Force of Creativity

Maria is a young artist from Moscow, Russia who found herself and her art just over a year ago - during the pandemic. When the whole world was locked inside their houses, Maria finally found the time to hear her true aspirations and wishes. Starting to call herself an artist freed Maria to explore the world and herself through art. Every piece is a result of her inner work, a part of the artist that she puts on public display. By showing it, Maria claims back her power, restoring it back to its rightful place.

The biggest influence and driver of Maria's creations is nature. The artist notices the uniqueness of form and the colors of natural elements, making them take on the role of other objects. Maria recontextualizes different elements of nature, merging them with people and their lives.

"Supinatra", which is to be auctioned on the NFT STARS marketplace, is a perfect example of how Maria works with flowers and finds unexpected combinations and visual associations. The artwork is a visualization of Maria's creative alter-ego and the recognition of its uniqueness and right to exist as it is. Through "Supinatra", the artist demonstrates that inside all of us, there are unique, free-spirited creatures. They might scare you, attract you and push you away. The goal is to take the time and effort to see them, recognize them... and finally set them free. The auction for the artwork is scheduled for October 14th at 10:00 UTC.
