“Cannabis is still a young space and there is no playbook for success. Our goal with this partnership is to bring best practices and proven strategies to help operators,” said Taylor Schuck, CPA and PKF Mueller’s Cannabis Niche leader. “Cultivators are operating primarily on manually compiled spreadsheets and hand-written logs. By automating those processes and producing key reports and KPI data, operators will have better data, more accurate reports, and finally be able to produce real-time financial data.”

This platform aims to assist cultivators in improving efficiency across their teams, deliver a consistent, high-quality product and grow their operations. Eldon Brown, CEO of Broadleaf says, “Accurate financial reporting is impossible without operational data. Broadleaf captures that data and makes an immediate impact across every part of the business because every team gets better data sooner. It also ensures that timely and accurate data is reported to the State, avoiding fines and penalties. Leveraging the Broadleaf platform enables them to stay ahead of the competition.”
